Reflection: Come Holy Spirit

Pentecost is the solemnity of the coming of the Holy Spirit and the inauguration of the Church. Today's feast reminds us of a gift. This gift is part of the promise that Jesus told his apostles in the Last discourse as found in today's Gospel where it was termed as the Paraclete, the advocate. With this gift comes the task of completing Jesus' work on earth which brings us the fullness of grace.

What does it mean to complete Jesus' work on earth? Evangelization means: to proclaim the Good News of Salvation. That is, to share the truth and reality of a God of love, mercy, and compassion. We accomplish this by living a life of integrity and a life of honesty and fidelity. Such honesty is manifested in our being true to who we are and our responsibilities. It's like a father who is a good provider and who takes care of his wife and children. Or perhaps a priest, who is true to his calling, embracing his vows of poverty, chastity and obedience.

The second component of the gift of the Holy Spirit is bringing the fullness of grace. Grace is usually associated with the blessings that we receive from God. But its most profound meaning, grace is found in God's self-giving to us, the presence of God-self in us. We allow God to truly dwell in us. It speaks of a union of hearts and minds with God, something that Jesus truly embodied in today's Gospel in terms of his very intimate relationship with his Father. Are we capable of reflecting the Father by showing mercy and love to those around us?

Finally, God's presence inspires us to be people of courage. Many times, we realize our responsibilities and what we need to do, but being human, we are afraid of uncertainties and the consequences of our actions. Yet, with God's grace, we are able to muster enough courage to fulfill our responsibilities.

Today's solemnity of Pentecost is also considered the anniversary of the birth of our Church. It may be good to ask ourselves about the situation and condition of our own communities. What have we done to sustain the growth of our Church? Is there more care and concern for one another? Can we feel the presence of God in each other? What can we do on a personal level to make our community a living witness of the Spirit of Jesus?

May the Holy Spirit give us the grace to forge deeper ties among our church and our communities so that we may serve as a concrete manifestation of witnessing to our Risen Lord.

Father Roselle
