Beautiful in His Eyes

Tax collectors were frowned upon by society in the time of Jesus: a tax collector was synonymous to 'an imposed suffering' to many, if not all, of the Jewish people. The tax collector Zacchaeus must have been a typical tax collector: efficient and wealthy but despised by the people.

For some reason, Zacchaeus wanted to see Jesus. Short in stature, he climbed a tree to await Jesus when he passed by. Jesus stops under the tree which Zacchaeus had climbed and invites himself to be the guest of Zacchaeus at his home.

The Gospel narrative shows us how Jesus was able to really read people. While Zacchaeus was despised as a typical tax collector, Jesus saw more in him: after all, Zacchaeus wanted to see Jesus and went to the rather unusual means of climbing a tree to see him pass by.

In gratitude to Jesus, Zacchaeus promises to give half his goods to the poor and to re-pay generously anyone he may have defrauded.

From the encounter of Zacchaeus with Jesus, we are encouraged to examine our own encounters with God. We might see and value ourselves based on what society dictates: the standing of our family and pedigree; our education and background; our profession and 'standing' in society.

How would God value who we are, or what we are? Only when we see ourselves through the eyes and values of God that we have our true worth and value in life.

Grace and Peace,
Fr. R C R A
