Transitions

Transitions can be, by their very nature, daunting, and change is always awkward and hard. Some just plunge straight in while others, such as myself, am a "toe-dipper". Anyway, we are in a time of transition all around.

To that end, I have been asked about several things that affect how we celebrate our Gathered Worship. I have been asked if the Cup will be offered to the people of God. I have been asked if we will be returning to two lectors. I have been asked if the second Sunday Mass will be returning to 11:00 am from its Covid placement at 11:30 am to allow adequate cleaning and disinfecting between Masses. To the first question, I answered "I certainly hope so." It is hard to daily proclaim that mandate of Jesus, "Take all of you and drink..." and then not offer it. For that to happen we would certainly need more ministers. (FYI, the Mayo clinic has done studies on communion from the Cup and people have more chance of receiving germs from the little bowls of water that we communally dip our fingers into, than from the Cup.)

To the second question about two lectors, that also is determined by the number of capable people who will come forward to proclaim to the community. In most parishes, it is difficult because when there are too few ministers, the onus on the few can become burdensome. This is a numbers-driven decision because the Church envisions two lectors, more for the Easter Vigil.

In terms of the return of the Mass time to 11:00 am, it makes perfect sense, but that is really a product of public opinion. Truth is, I have no social life anyway, so either time works. My experience tells me though, that 11 makes more sense to most people. Something cutting into lunch is always hard, and I make no apologies if my stomach starts grumbling. So, for now, we are interested in your thoughts on changing the Mass time, aye or nay.

Father Roy
